

AS IF THERE IS NO TOMORROW

Tassos Symeonides
(Academic Adviser, RIEAS)

Copyright: Research Institute for European and American Studies (www.rieas.gr) –
Publication date: 13 July 2015

Greece always devoured her talented, dedicated children with the same persistence as Cronus, the ancient Greek god, who would similarly devour his own sons as soon as they were born - fearing a prophecy that predicted he was going to be killed by one of his male offspring.

Greece has always done the same without distinction as to sex and as if there was no tomorrow.

As Greece sinks deeper and deeper in the worst life-and-death crisis of her modern history, the absence of the talented, the educated, and the truly dedicated on the front line is tragically and glaringly apparent.

Mass emigration of the best and the brightest minds of Greece has reached harrowing and unprecedented proportions, the expression “brain drain” unable to capture the real dimensions of this horrendous hemorrhage.

But even before the present calamity, the Greek establishment, that is to say, a corrupt, criminal political class; a handful of oligarch Mafias; and the shadow army of their sidekicks and promoters in the public sector and the venal media, had sandbagged the country against anyone who might have been honestly ready, willing and able to stand up for the national interest, the collective Good, and Greece’s sovereignty and territorial integrity.

To describe the Greek predicament as the triumph of “special interests” would be doing no justice to the depth, gravity and fatal consequences of the phenomenon.

As Greece teeters on the very edge of the abyss, pushed, pummeled and bone-crushed by some of her “partners” and executioners in the so-called European “union,” she might begin to realize what she has done to her best and brightest.

But, this repentance - if there is one - is too little, too late.

Today, Greece's evisceration by her "partners" delivers the ancient lesson of what happens to those who deliberately allow the lesser, the basest and the unworthy to run any part of human life, including that of a Nation.

Greece ate and drunk and borrowed and spent and destroyed her own best and brightest and deluded herself that there is, indeed, no tomorrow.

But tomorrow is here.

And there is no escape.