"As we all know that the International Criminal Police Organization (INTERPOL) was established with the purpose of ensuring and promoting the widest possible mutual assistance between all criminal police authorities and serves as the world's largest platform for police cooperation.

However, political interference has led to Taiwan's exclusion from INTERPOL for years, creating a huge gap in the international security network and causing concern for law and order in countries across the globe.

Given the rampant growth of terrorism and cross-border crimes today, it is essential for police worldwide to work together to create a seamless global law and order protection system.

Taiwan police wish to cooperate with their counterparts in other countries to jointly safeguard social justice.

Taiwan earnestly desires to contribute to global endeavors led by INTERPOL to ensure a safer world and to attend the INTERPOL General Assembly as an observer, as well as to meaningfully participate in INTERPOL meetings, mechanisms, and other activities."
