

CatalinaIQ: Intelligence Community Tradecraft for the Private, Government, and Academic Sectors

RIEAS is pleased to welcome Catalina Intelligent Solutions LLC (CatalinaIQ) to its network. Founded by Celia D. Hanley, a former Senior Operations Officer of the Central Intelligence Agency and the Defense Intelligence Agency with more than forty years in clandestine operations, counterintelligence, and international security, CatalinaIQ translates intelligence community tradecraft into practical protection for organizations that adversaries actively target.

Readers of RIEAS will know Hanley's recent contribution, "The Front We Cannot See," on cognitive warfare along Europe's southeastern edge. That analysis reflects the core of the firm's work: helping governments, companies, universities, and family offices understand what an adversary already knows about them, and how to close the gap.

CatalinaIQ's practice areas include cognitive security and counter-disinformation program design, counterintelligence and insider threat assessment, foreign national employment risk screening, protection against ubiquitous technical surveillance, and retained strategic advisory. Each is grounded in operational experience rather than compliance checklists.

CatalinaIQ welcomes collaboration with RIEAS members and with institutions and practitioners across the European and American intelligence studies community.
